

Report from KWMR Central

The second KWMR Annual Report reflects continued growth, both from within our local community and from our community of listeners online.

We are truly honored by the involvement of donors and volunteers of great enthusiasm and dedication, and I marvel daily at what a tidy, tranquil station we are. Maybe it's the water. We live in the most extraordinary place: where the beauty and complexity of our physical, economic and social ecosystems furnish ideas and content for our programming; where the wealth of interesting and talented folks never ceases to amaze; and where the generosity of spirit gives one hope.

This year, one of our volunteers, Richard Dillman, was honored by the National Federation of Community Broadcasters for his valiant technical support of KWMR. Richard's voluntary work continues to fill what should be a staff position but one that KWMR would be hard-pressed at present to fund.

We have received funding in the past year from Marin Community Foundation, the County of Marin and the Stinson/Bolinas Fund—clear evidence that KWMR is valued as a community resource.

We are grateful to these and all of the donors you see listed in this report. Each and every one is an important link in our network of communication and entertainment. A special acknowledgement is in order for our volunteer programmers, who remain committed to providing the best quality radio they know how—and enthusiastic about learning more.

I would personally like to thank our Board of Directors, an energetic group, led by President Susan Robinson, who have seen their hard work pay off in 2005 with increased organizational stability. To our incredible staff, Lyons Filmer, Adrienne Pfeiffer and Andrew Shaw, I give, as ever, high marks for dedication and commitment above and beyond the call.

And to you, our listeners, we are nothing without you. Let's give ourselves a hand for 2005!

Serving a vital role for the community

Shelter from the Storm

When you read this, remember New Year's Eve 2005. Recall the days before and immediately after the storms (sandbagging, clearing downed trees, and dodging mud), when we were all groping or sliding our way through pelting rain. Here on the western edge of the sodden world, we were lucky: no life catastrophes and so many people helping one another. Our West Marin emergency response and public service teams worked together extremely effectively, night through day, and learned a lot to ready us for the next time.

At KWMR, we had a lot to be thankful for! Volunteers! We want to thank each of you who who clambered through to keep KWMR on air for so many days without our full complement of programmers, some of whom were not able to get to Point Reyes Station. You kept West Marin alert to road closures and flood conditions. Thanks to the volunteer teams who turned our generators off at midnight and then on again by 7:00 AM. Thanks to Richard Dillman for being an all-round hero, tirelessly tuning wires so we could broadcast. And thank goodness for the new special-channel communications

KWMR's Mission

Create and broadcast local programming that gives voice to the diverse passions and concerns of West Marin residents. Serve our communities in times of emergency. Provide instruction and experience in radio production and journalism to local groups and individuals.

Action station. Bolinas volunteers braved weather extremes throughout 2005 to service KWMR's generator and help the community stay informed. Lucy Reid, Sheila O'Donnell and Denise Stoops (above, L to R) were joined on site by Joyce Clements.

Finally, thanks to so many members who fulfilled our year-end hopes for extra special support. We will use your contributions to make our emergency responsiveness and programming even better.
